

Another Child at the Inn by Florence Eden

"WERE have you been my son?" his mother said,
"You're away from me... it's time for bed!"
She took him gently, ruffling back his hair And him stumbling up the broad, stone steps.

"We have you been?" she asked him in surprise, giving a sweet dazed look within his eyes As if he had been blinded by a light Strange and beautiful, that all his sight came in a distant glory. Then the boy poked up at her, his rosy face all joy, "The cattle stood around and ate the hay," he said, "and there a tiny baby lay." A tiny baby, mother, and I stared Through one small crack... but no one saw or cared.

The baby's mother smiled, and all was gold Around him like a light... and very old, Rich men did worship him upon their knees.
He paused, then pointing, cried, "Oh, mother, please

Look out and see that shining, shining star!
How big and bright it is! How wide and far It sends the light!" So, then they both drew near

The window to look out. "And can't you hear Sweet singing, mother? Tell me, are there white wings... and angels flying through the night?"

The child grew drowsy and his curly head Drooped like a flower. Gently to his bed His mother carried him. And there he stayed Kneeling beside him, happy yet afraid.

MR. BARBER, deep in thought, seated at a broad desk, heavily laden with papers which bore evidence of her many responsibilities, planned and pondered the question at length. She was of slight build. Her hair was tinged with gray, her complexion clear, her eyes brown and sparkling, her facial expression most pleasant, although one could not help but note at the moment a trace of worry.

There were exactly one hundred and fifty old people in the institution depending upon her care and judgment. Never was this fact brought so forcefully to her attention as it was at Christmas time. To be sure, people were generous and thoughtful in remembering this group. That was exactly it. How could one put this generosity into a form which would benefit the largest number in the group? The agitation of the question had begun but today, when Mrs.
Barber had received a note and a donation of fifty dollars from a group of fine, public-spirited citizens who were endowed with the true Christian spirit. The accompanying note merely stated that its use could best be determined by Mrs. Barber, and so would be left entirely to her good judgment. She read the note once more as it lay on the desk before her.

"Our group or society has a little fund raised in various ways by its members. Each year at Christmas time, we give fifty dollars of this fund to the head of some institution, and leave it to the judgment of the person in charge as to how it will be disposed of to best advantage in their particular or peculiar situation. It has occurred to us that the children are more apt to be well taken care of them are the institutions such as yours. We therefore wish to remember the Old People's home with our small sum. We have enjoyed acknowledging this money and hope it adjusting to your other yearly contributions.

We may help to bring cheer and happiness to your home on Christmas day."

The evening failed to disclose the adequate solution for this problem.
However, on the morning, Mrs. Barber awoke with a radiant face. With the clearness of the morning, the crispness of the air and the invigorating which had come through sleep, restful sleep, the perplexities vanished, and Mrs. Barber saw her way clearly defined before her. Her feet and hands could work fast enough to comply with the wishes of her brain.
Time was limited. Plans must be drawn up quickly and executed immediately.

The next day saw the telephone as a center of interest. It was constantly in use either for outgoing or incoming calls. If Mrs. Barber had realized how many phone operators she was out, her kindness and would certainly have made her spend her phone calls over two days. She was so enthusiastic and absorbed in her plans that she was not aware of her excessive tax upon these girls.
The last phone call brought smiles and added energy to Mrs. Barber as she hurried off into the heart of the great smoky city. She spent perhaps an hour behind closed doors in conference with the matron in charge of the large settlement house. At the end of that time she emerged with a piece of paper bearing the names of some fifteen young boys and girls, glancing down the list she swallowed forcibly, uttered a peculiar sound and shook her head as she said:

"Can't exactly say I am very upset at pronouncing these long foreign names."

The settlement house matron put her hand on Mrs. Barber's shoulder in an affectionate manner.
"Don't worry. They understand and are used to it. They will help you and you will soon learn their Americanized versions." The next two days were spent in the city library. From the stacks of books which Mrs. Barber went through in her two days there, but one did she select to take away with her.

For some few days after this Mrs.
Barber occupied her time with the white paper with the list of un-pronounceable names, the book, and last but not least, fifteen vivacious young persons, grimy and a little crude, but how sweet, earnest, happy and eager they were. The training had to be patiently undertaken. The response was altogether what might have been

Can They Count on You?

By E. A. ROBINSON
in Farm and Ranch

CAN they count on you to always do the thing that you know is right?
Or do they think you're sure to do it?
When the count demands a fight?
Do they say of you "He is true blue?"
In the work committed to you?
Who will stick to your work and never shrink Till you carry your contract through?

Or do they say "He'll run away In the time of need?"
His desert tree was in his selfish pleasure?
His idol is he or greed?
Do they also say "He loves to play When the game goes his own way, But he gets lame when he loses the game,
And is ready to charge foul play?"

Do your friends all feel you'll stand like steel When the great test comes to you?
That you'll face the strife, and give your life For the cause you know is true?
Or do they fear when the test draws near Shall they find you in the rear?
You'll sell the Christ for a paltry price, And play the traitor's part?

We are needing men who can clearly see The things that are most worth while;
Who can look ahead and forget the dead,
And at the same time smile.
For the thoughtful man who can work and plan With the skillful hand at his command, Who can benefit his kind.

They look long in the common throng For the man of faith and love, Who can think and feel for his brother's weal, And plan for the life above.
With a tender heart to take the part Of the weak and the poor, Who help him in his need and pain, Who keep the Christ within.

expected from these kind-hearted, high-spirited youngsters.

Then, lastly, there were the house decorations to be attended to. There were willing hands in the home which helped hang wreaths, trim the tree and put up the little sprigs of holly and mistletoe. Melodies not familiar to the younger generation filled the house. The humming and quiet whistling told of expected joys not now far in the offing.

There was shopping to be done and many preparations for the food which would be necessary. Busy days, but what happy ones. Mrs. Barber was never too busy or too tired to stop and have a friendly chat with anyone of the elderly people, to profit from their suggestions or abide by their wisdom, if it was at all possible to do so.

Christmas Day, the day, arrived.
When the old folks came down to their breakfast, they found a Christmas tree laden with at least one gift for each. They were as pleased and happy as children with their presents.

At noon the festivities took on proportion. One would never have guessed that the folks ranged anywhere from seventy to ninety-five, as they trooped in to Christmas dinner.
The table was heavily laden with the Christmas delicacies, especially good for people of their age. They also had another little surprise. They had fifteen radiantly happy guests who were introduced to them. It was indeed hard to judge which was enjoying the dinner the most, the young or the old. Somehow it is so, the young folks entered it the most.

Before the group left the table Mrs.
Barber made a little announcement.
"Our guests have come out today not only to help us enjoy our Christmas dinner, but to help us to have a delightful afternoon. They have come prepared to present a short Christmas play and to furnish us a little musical entertainment."

From the chuckles, smiles, laughter and applause, there was no doubt

There Were Willing Hands Which Helped Trim the Tree.

about the approval with which the entertainment was received. The young people were worth of all the praise which they received. The evening had been successful. The day had been delightful and was a triumph of conversation for a long time.
Mrs. Barber was even happier over the occasion than the old folks. It was a thing that she could be proud of.
She realized that this vision, her achievement, had been practical. The fifty dollars had given pleasure to not only the old people but it gave these young foregoing settlement-house children a chance to share in the joys of Christmas, the joy of giving of their own talents, receiving the congratulatory rewards of pleasure, praise and rememberance, the joy of finding the true Christmas spirit in giving freely of themselves, as well as having had a sumptuous Christmas dinner which otherwise might have been merely a thing of their dreams.

Seek Religious Calm

in Faith of Buddhism

In London it is said that Buddhist missionaries have made more than 300 converts in England in less than a year, not among orientals who have defected into the world's most famous port, but among Englishmen and English women.

This ought not to cause much astonishment. Some people are always in a state of unrest and discontent with respect to religious matters. They look for peace of mind and spirit which they have not found and they are ready to try something they have not tested.

Buddhism has an especial appeal to such persons now, in the foremost countries of the western world, because it exalts quiet faith in the ultimate destiny of man and teaches serenity toward repose, serenity of thought and feeling. Some individuals who find themselves more or less out of tune with their times and their environment imagine that such faith is an endless ultimate calm, and such striving toward it is the one thing they yearn for and most need. Cleve-

Buried Treasure Now

Located by Wireless

Buried treasure is said to have been discovered in paying quantities by a party of British and American adventurers in Panama City. The party is equipped with a new wireless device that indicates the presence of large quantities of buried metal.
At Panama City, jewels, plate, and clashes of precious metal are said to have been found.

If the treasure seeker continues to prove a success, it will probably be used in searching for pirates' hoards in the West Indies and on the Mexican coast, as well as in two other spots, Caros Island, off the coast of Chile, and a small volcanic island off Brazil. These two places are known as the world's greatest treasure fields.

BOSCHÉ'S SYRUP

The HOLIDAY GUEST

by Elizabeth
Blessing

His plum pudding was ripening, and the guest room was prettier with the yellow drapes than I had ever dreamed it could be, and the mistletoe hung in all the ways—all there was left to do was to take the guest towels to the room. As I was taking two of the finest hand-embroidered towels to the linen closet, it occurred to me to ask my husband just how his sister Willa looked, since I had never seen her and was going to all the trouble of arranging theater, bridge, and Christmas parties for her during a Christmas visit with us.

"What?" Charles had hesitated, "I ask you once that she was a home-body and old-fashioned."

"But that's very indefinite," I had said. "How tall is she?"
"Well, she's about five feet, six-and your height, and has long, red hair. I suppose it's still long, and she's rather fat, and—"

"Fat?" I had gasped, "your sister fat? And then I had visions of Raymond Garfield's expression when he saw me standing under the mistletoe, the old-fashioned, fat, red-headed who was to be his partner at all the parties."

"Ray, Charles, you don't remember she is fat," Charles went on, although she has money from years of teaching, she always was a faded blue serge suit with a red belt. The doorbell's ringing interrupted him.

"Oh, we're in!" I said. "A telephone and tearing it open, I read that was at 2143 at the Union depot at 11:30."

"I couldn't possibly miss her—the red-headed school teacher in blue serge—with a belt, I knew as I settled in my seat."

I stepped from the train conscious of a patronizing attitude I had assumed, but nowhere could I see anything answering Willa's description.

It was nearly five o'clock when I reached the last store, where I had charge account, but where my

I Thought as I Settled in My Seat.

"This is my own pen, and 'W. W.' stands for my name, Willa Woodrow."
"Willa Woodrow?" I gasped. "This girl?" Then taking my true thoughts, I hastened to greet her, exclaiming:
"I'm Willa Woodrow, Charles' wife." I wrote my check while Willa put things back into my pockets, and we walked from the store together.
"But, Willa dear," I exclaimed after we were on the car, "Charles said 'red hair, and fat.' And I added mentally, 'faded blue serge.'" "Exactly, dear—look at me," Willa commanded.

"I'm looking," I smiled, "but what I see is just golden hair crowning a plump, but not too plump, pink and white face from which shine two magic blue eyes, and—"

Then I remembered the holiday parties I had planned for Charles' homelike, old-fashioned sister, and I pre-tured the fascinated gleam which would come into Raymond Garfield's eyes when he saw Willa standing under the mistletoe.

SWEATER ENSEMBLE COSTUMES

By JULIA BOTTOMLEY

IF IT is a three-piece sports or street costume, then depend upon it, one of the three pieces is almost certain to be a slip-on sweater, for sweater ensembles are "the ink of the town" this season.

The smart thing about these modish sweaters on 'tis is the fact of the sweater being so closely related to the skirt and coat or cape. If you will have it so, both in matter of coloring and design until the ensemble forms a perfect unit. For instance, many a tweed suit is accompanied by a knitted pullover, which repeats the tweed patterning of the cloth, as well as its exact colors.

It makes it all the more fascinating that the colors which appear in the sweater ensemble suits are delightfully autumn-like. Some have the warmth and glow of rosy winter reds ranging from wine tones to scarlet, these interwoven with neutral tones or metallic effects. All the new browns and various beige tones show forth at their best in these sweater knitted and cloth suits.

Speaking of the metallic note as introduced into sportswear, when used discreetly, it adds decided tone to the scheme. Sweaters in brown and beige and wine or dark green and especially dull rose shades which have threads of gold interwoven are the "classy" thing today.

While this is very much of a tweed season, as far as the cloth part of the sports ensemble is concerned, it is also very much of a kasha season. These two outstanding materials, however, do not entirely usurp the field for homespun, flannel and velveteen, especially the latter, all play important roles in the world of sports fashions.

There is an interesting point about the sports costume which one of America's screen favorites, Norma Shearer, is wearing in this picture, and that is that it is collarless. This simple neckline is intentional on the part of the designer, as latest vogue calls for the collarless type so as to better accommodate a separate fur neck piece for scarfs of beige or silver or platinum or pointed fox ears quite the rage with the winter cloth ensembles. The sweater accents wave stripes of warm rich tones against a beige background which accurately repeats the beige of the kasha which is employed for this skirt and coat.

OATMEAL MUFFINS AFFORD PLEASING BREAKFAST DISH

If you put the oatmeal into the muffins instead of serving it for a cereal, the family will have a pleasant surprise and the monotony of having breakfast always patterned in one way will be agreeably broken. The butter needed to spread the muffins will correspond more or less to the cream that might have been used on the oatmeal, so urge everyone to eat the muffins liberally, and provide plenty of them, for they will be popular. The bureau of home economics furnishes the recipe:

Oatmeal Muffins.

1 cup wheat flour 1 cup milk 1/2 cup rolled oats 1 egg 1/2 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 teaspoon salt

Grind the rolled oats through the fine knife at the meat grinder, thus making a fine meal. Combine the dry ingredients. Beat the eggs and add the milk. Mix the dry and the liquid ingredients together and stir in the melted butter. Pour the batter into greased muffin tins and bake for 20 to 25 minutes in a fairly hot oven.

Rooster hasn't told us about Christmas.

"It's a day when all the world gets up early," said Mr. Rooster.

"And what have we to do with the world?" asked the little chickens.

"We care for the barnyard—not for the world."

"But the world cares for the barnyard," said Mr. Rooster.

"Nonsense," said Pinky Pig. "Only tell us your reason for waking us up."

"Because of Christmas morning the farmer feels so happy, and the child feels so happy that they give us an extra breakfast."

"Oh," said Pinky Pig, squeaking happily, "now that is different, quite different."

"You see," continued Mr. Rooster, "an old man by the name of Santa Brachman Sauce.—Melt two table-spoonsful of butter, add three table-spoonsful of flour, one fourth tea-spoonful of salt, a few grains of pepper, one-half cupful of chicken stock well seasoned and one-half cupful of thin cream. Stir and cook until smooth and well cooked.

Cranberry Dishes Are Liked by Everybody

Cranberries are in season a good part of the fall and winter, and they have many delicious uses besides being made into sauce and jelly to serve with the turkey. One of the newest desserts made of cranberries is a pie—made as directed below by the bureau of home economics:

1 quart cranberry 2 table-spoons butter 1/2 cup sugar 1/2 teaspoon salt 1/2 cup water

Select firm berries and wash them well, rejecting all that are withered. Prepare a strap of the sugar, water and salt, and when the sugar is dissolved add the fruit and cook for five to eight minutes until the berries have a glazed look. Add the butter and cook 15 minutes with the pastry. Pour the cranberries into the pie on the upper crust after moistening the lower rim and press the edges together to hold in the juices. Put a slit to allow the steam to escape. Bake until the crust is golden brown.

Shred luncheon should include some raw vegetables.

Barouni Olive Adapted for Pickling When Ripe

Olive as familiar to the American table are usually the green olives picked while of with pits removed and stuffed in the Mediterranean countries. It is customary to use the ripened fruit cured in salt, which forms a staple part of the daily diet of the workers. The olive cured in salt is only rarely used here. The United States Department of Agriculture has introduced a new variety called the Barouni olive, specially adapted for pickling ripe, which is a native of north Africa, and an original stock of three trees has been expanded until there are now orchards of about 100 acres total area in California.

The department has recently published a pamphlet from an account of Barouni olive introduction at Sacramento No. 1477 from the 1935 Yearbook of Agriculture, which reports that "methods of processing and canning the ripe fruit have been developed which have resulted in a product greatly relished by many who have become familiar with it."

The Barouni olive yield heavily in the government's plant introduction garden in California an eleven-year-old tree produced 325 pounds of fruit.

Story for Children

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

Mr. Rooster crowed ahead of time. "Well," said Pinky Pig, "why are you waking us up at this hour? That is what I'd like to know."

"Because it's a day they call Christmas," said Mr. Rooster.

"Well," grunted Pinky Pig again, "why does a day that is named Christmas mean anything more to us than any other day?"

"Of course winter is different from summer."

"Oh, is it, indeed?" chuckled Mrs. Hen, "how extremely bright of you, Pinky?"

"Now, don't be rude," said Pinky. "You don't know much more your self."

"Yes, I do," said Mrs. Hen, "I know when the sun shines and when it rains."

"There is a great deal of difference in days."

"But still," said the goat, "Mr. Rooster hasn't told us about Christmas."

"It's a day when all the world gets up early," said Mr. Rooster.

"And what have we to do with the world?" asked the little chickens.

"We care for the barnyard—not for the world."

"But the world cares for the barnyard," said Mr. Rooster.

"Nonsense," said Pinky Pig. "Only tell us your reason for waking us up."

Claus calls on the children and fills their stockings."

"What has that to do with us?" said Mrs. Cow. "We don't wear stockings—we don't even own them—so that wouldn't help us."

"But," said Mr. Rooster, "they are so pleased at getting so many goodies themselves that they give us some."

"I wonder if that is so," said Pinky Pig.

But before they had talked much more the farmer came out with the grain and seed for their breakfast.

And he gave them some special food, and such good things to eat that they knew it must be because it was Christmas day—some very particular sort of a day when everybody was kind and gave presents.

"Merry Christmas, animals," said the farmer, as he showered their pens and stalls and homes with a due breakfast.

The animals were delighted! Pinky Pig tried to squeal "A Merry Christmas," the rooster crowed his delight, the cows gave a moo, and the noise in the barnyard meant they were all enjoying Christmas morning!

Recipe for Tasty Devil's Food Cake

Something Every Housewife Likes to Have on Hand.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every woman likes to have a good recipe on hand for making devil's food cake. It is a matter of conjecture whether this cake is so named because of the contrast of its dark brown color to snowy white "angel food" or because it frequently turned out to be quite reddish in color. The bureau of home economics, however, says the red color is due to using too much soda when the devil's food is made with sour milk, and as overuse of soda is not desirable, this ingredient should be carefully measured.

Devil's Food Cake.
1 1/2 cup butter 1 1/2 cup flour (soft) 1 cup sugar 1 egg 1/2 cup milk 1/2 teaspoon baking powder 1/2 cup milk 1/2 teaspoon vanilla 1/2 cup milk 1/2 teaspoon salt

Cream the butter and the sugar and add the well-beaten eggs and mix well. Sift the dry ingredients and add in the first mixture alternately with the milk.

Add the chocolate, which has been melted over steam, and the vanilla and beat until well mixed with the batter. Bake in a greased pan in a sheet for 35 minutes at a temperature between 300 and 325 degrees Fahrenheit. Cover lightly with powdered sugar and serve. Or, if preferred, bake the cake in two layers and make a vanilla filling.

In this cake mixture sour milk can be used in place of the sweet milk. In that case dissolve one-half teaspoonful of soda in one teaspoonful of water and add at the same time with the sour milk. The chocolate can also be increased by one square if one likes a strong chocolate flavor.

Conveniences for Kitchen

Modern Sink Placed at Height Convenient for Housewife—Tea Wagon Made by Her and Her Husband, Gloucester County, New Jersey.

Here's a New Jersey farm kitchen which has all the conveniences of a city home and some of the advantages of a country house, too. The very modern porcelain sink has been properly placed at a height from the floor convenient for the woman who is likely to do most of the work at it. The sink has a drain board of its own and there is a little extra shelf at the side for better handling of the dishes as they are washed. Sifted dishes are brought from the table on the tea wagon, which was the idea of the woman and her husband. A high stool, which is on casters, like the tea wagon enables the housewife to sit down while washing dishes if she wishes to. Under the handy shelf above the sink all the small miscellaneous utensils in constant use are hung as soon as they are washed. A drain board is used to eliminate some of the wiping with a towel, since dishes may be placed in the basket and drenched with scalding hot water, then left to dry.

Suggestions for improving this kitchen were made by the Gloucester county home demonstration agent. It may be noted also that the floor is covered with linoleum so as to be easily kept clean.
